Headline:
Heavy snow parts of Scotland, milder further south.

Today:
Snow for parts of Scotland, heavy over higher ground, increasingly focused north of the central belt but rain more likely towards coasts. Windy and cold here. Southern areas milder. Misty start in places but areas of showery rain moving northeastwards.

Tonight:
Snow continuing to build up across inland parts of Scotland north of the central lowlands. Heavy rain in some central areas of UK. Becoming drier in south, some fog patches.

Friday:
Further heavy snowfall for parts of Scotland, blizzards over high ground. Heavy rain in places through central slice of the UK. Some showers further south but some bright, mild weather.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
The very cold air which is currently in place across the north will spread southwestwards across the whole UK. Snowfall is highly likely, especially across many eastern areas.
